

Domesticated: Evolution in a Man-Made World

By Richard C. Francis

WW Norton Co, United States, 2016. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 211 x 142 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book. Without our domesticated plants and animals, human civilization as we know it would not exist. We would still be living at subsistence level as hunter-gatherers if not for domestication. It is no accident that the cradle of civilization-the Middle East-is where sheep, goats, pigs, cattle, and cats commenced their fatefully intimate association with humans. Before the agricultural revolution, there were perhaps 10 million humans on earth. Now there are more than 7 billion of us. Our domesticated species have also thrived, in stark contrast to their wild ancestors. In a human-constructed environment-or man-made world-it pays to be domesticated. Domestication is an evolutionary process first and foremost. What most distinguishes domesticated animals from their wild ancestors are genetic alterations resulting in tameness, the capacity to tolerate close human proximity. But selection for tameness often results in a host of seemingly unrelated by-products, including floppy ears, skeletal alterations, reduced aggression, increased sociality, and reduced brain size. It s a package deal known as the domestication syndrome. Elements of the domestication syndrome can be found in every domesticated species-not only cats, dogs, pigs,...
