The discrepancies in latitude, longitude, and azimuth were very small over this stretch of about 900 miles along the line of triangulation, amounting to 0. 16 in latitude, 0. 44 in longitude, and 5. 75 in in azimuth. The changes introduced by the adjustment were equivalent to a change of about the 1100000 part in the lengths of the lines. The average change in the angles was less than 0. 10. The greatest change in any angle was 0. 30. The probable error of an angle over this stretch as given in Professional Papers No. 24 is about 0. 30. No violence, therefore, was done to the work in fitting it to the United States standard positions. The old position computation, the results of which are given in Professional Papers No. 24, was used in deriving the discrepancies in latitude, longitude, and azimuth for the condition equations after making a suitable allowance for what the result would have been if the new and later value for the length of the standard bar R. 1876 had been used instead of the provisional value which had to be used for the results as given in No. 24.
