Ashland Press, United States, 2014. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . Questions about the Afterlife? You Must Read This! A successful young family man seemed to have it all; a beautiful home, a Rockwellian family, new cars, boats, airplanes and European vacations. His only creed was, He who dies with the most toys, wins. Then, just when life seemed perfect . . . a Stanford medical diagnosed him with just 5 months to live, and his whole world came crashing down. As the young family struggled to comprehend what was happening, the 5 months stretched to 12. Being agnostic, he did t believe any after death stories, expecting only oblivion, on death. However, as his wife pondered what would happen to her family, she wanted to do more to fight his dying. But, they had had the best doctors money could buy. So, short of visiting a South American witch doctor, what were they to do? However, as death approached, his pain grew worse and death became more and more attractive. But, to his wife and daughters, this growing acceptance of dying, seemed like abandonment. Then, in the darkness of one early morning, when death finally did come, he found he had been wrong about the oblivion. Instead, he suddenly was falling through space . . . and his afterlife experiences had begun. Here is his first afterlife story as excerpted from, Dying to Really Live: There to greet me was my grandfather, Amos, along with my favorite boyhood dog, Butch, his tail wagging in greeting. And there was my other granddad, with his wry, bemused smile, all central characters in my Rockwellian childhood. There too, was an old rancher who lived across the river from where I grew up, who had always...
