These typical symptoms are the number one people visit their doctor and have to take days off work every year. Although these are not life-threatening conditions, I m sure your life would be much better without them. A common cold is a medical condition caused by more than 200 different virus types. These tiny organisms are responsible for over 1 billion common colds every year. Common colds begin when the virus is transmitted from one person to another. It attaches to the mucous tissue of the nose or throat. In this case, your immune system sends out white blood cells to the infected area. However, when you have poor lifestyle habits and choices, your immune system is weakened and most of these viruses enter the body creating common colds and other health...
