On Demand Publishing, LLC-Create Space, 2014. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .This book is about the compassion needed for disabled students with autism and/or a language learning disability in the college setting. It is my idea of a system of advocacy for the sake of the disabled individual by everybody involved through a process of channeling. A student that notices differences in another student and suspects they may have some deficiencies in communicating with others or displays odd behaviors or seems to get confused easily over things may suggest to the individual they might could get language therapy to help them and if they think they cannot talk a language therapy into giving them therapy, you may could talk to them yourself to let them know what you noticed about this person and see if there is anything they can do to help. In turn the language therapist could give the other student pointers on how to work with the disabled person if they get confused about something, and they can be working on two way conversations, sequencing, memory, and problem solving situations in therapy in the meanwhile. If the therapist also explains to the disabled student s teachers what they are like, what to expect, what their needs are, and what they can do to help them by using alternative means of communication with them that would help the disabled person convey their thoughts easier, and also understand them easier, as well as helping break things into smaller steps for them that confuse them it will make things easier for both them and the teacher. The teacher can ask the students to do the same and tell them what to expect and give them an understanding of the person and how...
